

Video: First Look at the zBoost by Wi-Ex

July 21, 2011

Last month Larry and I made a day trip to New York City to check out fall version of Pepcom's Digital Experience event. This is a much smaller version of CES and includes an array of current and new technologies on display. We get to see many of the same companies that attend the Pepcom Digital Experience at CES each year. Since this occurs at the half way point to the CES show in Vegas we look forward to seeing what's coming out for rest of the year and spend more time with companies who may be too busy to talk to during CES.

The zBoost by Wi-EX helps boost the signal of your iPhone in parts of your house where it's really lacking. For example, as you will see in the included video, my basement has little to no signal. This product, I hope helps improve that, since I pretty much spend all my time down there. This current model I am testing retails for $299.99 here.

I will continue to try out this product and follow up with a full review in a couple weeks but for now check out my unboxing and initial thoughts after the break.

